Blames Reversal Of Palestinians. On Israel Issue

By Marcus Eliason The Associated Press

LONDON - Britain abruptly canceled talks Monday with two PLO representatives, saying they had failed to make good a promise to renounce violence and recognize Israel's right to exist.

The surprise move dealt a blow to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's hopes of unjamming the Middle East peace process and drawing the United States into talks with the Palestine Liberation

The Palestinian press agency WAFA put out an "urgent message" saying the London office's statement did not speak for the two PLO men or for the PLO as a whole. It said the PLO executive committee would issue an anthoritative statement later.

A Thatcher aide said the prime minister was "extremely disap-pointed," feeling she had taken a gamble that, "when it came to the final hurdle, the PLO was not willing to fulfill."

U.S. Still Seeks PLO Official

By Ivan Stefanovic

BELGRADE - Mohammed Abbas, the Palestine Liberation Organization official sought by the United States for allegedly masterminding the hijacking of an Italian cruise ship, has left Yugoslavia, the Yugoslav news agency and a PLO representative said Monday.

In Washington, Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d warned: "There is no safe haven as far as we're concerned. We'll pursue Mr. Abbas as we would any other fugitive."

Mr. Abbas flew to Yugoslavia on Saturday from Italy, where the au-thorities said they had no legal grounds to hold him. The United States had asked Italy and later Yugoslavia, to arrest him and strongly protested the Italian deci-sion to let him go.

However, there was confusion over whether Mr. Abbas, 38, had indeed left Yugoslavia, which has good relations with the PLO.

Tanjug, the Yugoslav news agency, said Monday that Mr. Abbas. who is also known as Abu Abbas, had left the country but gave no details. A PLO representative confirmed his departure but did not say where he had gone.

"I don't know why, don't know vhere, don't know how," he said. The PLO official, who spoke at the PLO mission in Belgrade, refused to give his name or answer ques-tions, but he said he spoke for the head of the mission. At one point, the PLO official will go to his November summit meeting with President Ronald Reagan ready to strike a "gentle-men's agreement" to leave serious arms control negotiations to specialists while he and Mr. Reagan concentrate on achieving a climate of understanding that could lead to a second meeting.

Mr. Meese called Mr. Abbas "an international criminal" and ruled out any idea of immunity.

This assessment emerges from descriptions of Mr. Gorbachev's private meetings this month with President François Mitterrand and relayed it to the United States.

French officials also are communicating to Washington a judgment that Mr. Gorbachev's comments indicated that he may prefer to give the appearance of having begun promising negotiations with Mr. Reagan that could be completed and ratified at a later meeting. The leader that French officials MOSCOW - Nikolai K. Baibakov, who oversaw planning of the Soviet economy for two decades, has retired and been replaced by Nikolai V. Talyzin. formerly a deputy prime minister in the national government, Tass said Monday.

The report, released Sunday, said a sampling of 1,874 men serving time for felonies in 11 state prisons around the United States found that 75 percent said they expected little or no trouble if they tried to obtain a handgun after their release. The men overwhelmingly preferred high-quality large caliber weapons to small-bore, cheap "Saturday night specials," the report said.

The study also found that 57 percent of the men had owned a handgun at the time of the arrest that put them in prison, that 32 percent of these guns had been stolen and that only 21 percent had been bought through legitimate retail outlets. Another 26 percent were acquired in black The announcement said that Mr. Talyzin, 56, had been appointed chairman of Gosplan, the state planning commission, in place of Mr. Baibakov, 74.

The replacement of Mr. Baibakov, who had held his post since October 1965, was seen as a further move by Mikhail S. Gorbachev to rejuvenate the political and economic leadership of the country and boost economic performance.

Developed by IBM for the PC, it puts the power of the printed word right next to every IBM PC, independent of the central printer.

The IBM Proprinter is small in size and low in price, so it will fit on anyone's desk-top, and within most people's budgets.

At the same time it is a quality, multi-feature machine that can be many things to many people.

Multi-function: The IBM Proprinter is versatile and can be used for many different office tasks: producing drafts and reports for the secretary, memos for the manager, charts for the sales director, lists for the accountant, and research papers for engineers and scientists.

Its graphics ability should not be overlooked: it will produce an excellent copy of your designs.

Multi-speed: Proprinter offers three text modes: near letter-quality, text and normal, each giving a suitable character style and printing at speeds of 40, 100 and 200 characters per second.

Multi-type: These three "text modes" will produce up to 18 different combinations of text styles.

You can select from a range of typefaces and a choice of character sets, which allow you to print in various European languages, together with a range of technical symbols.

You can even create your own alphabets and customised sets of symbols.

Multi-feed: The IBM Proprinter accepts continuous forms or cut-sheet paper. But, unlike some other printers, you don't have to change the paper tray each time you change the format.

A convenient cut-sheet slot in the front of the machine receives notepaper, or even envelopes for immediate printout.

Mini-price: The cost of buying and running this new IBM printstation is in proportion to its size – very small.

Hard Military Questions

some are more uneasy than ever. The extra money has in no way cured the underlying problems of defense organization. A trillion dollars seems to have bought pitifully little.

In a notable series of speeches, Senators Barry Goldwater and Sam Nunn have laid out a daunting list of what they believe is wrong with the defense establishment. As the char-man and ranking minority member of the Armed Services Committee, they are principals of that establishment. All the more astonishing, therefore, for Mr. Goldwater to say: You will be shocked at the serious deficiencies in the organization and procedures of the Department of Defense and the Congress. If we have to fight tomorrow, these problems will cause Americans to die unnecessarily. Even more, they may cause us to lose the fight."

The problems start with the longstanding inability of the services to work together. From Pearl Harbor and Leyte Gulf to the Iran rescue mission, service rivalry has led to disaster or near-disaster. Even in the invasion of Grenada, the army's and navy's inability to cooperate extended from lack of unified command on the ground to incompatible radios. In battle, the key to interservice communication proved to be an AT&T credit card. The army and navy even held their planning sessions separately. with service counterparts not invited. "We were lucky in Grenada," says Mr. Nunn. "We may not be so fortunate next time."

American military forces are supposed to be coordinated by "unified commanders." like the commander in chief of American forces in Europe, In practice, a regional commander in chief has little real control over the army, navy and air force officers under him, since they also report to their service chiefs. It is the service chiefs, not the unified "cincs," who dominate the Pentagon's budgeting.
The service chiefs form the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the supreme military command under the president and the secretary of defense. But the Joint Chiefs insist on unanimity and the principle that no service's interests should be harmed. Their advice to civilian superiors eight million to the voting rolls.

After six years of sharply increasing military budgets, those who demanded the buildup should have solid ground for contentment. Yet tains, "rarely override their individual service allegiances ... The services win the tug of war, but the country loses."

The Joint Chiefs fail to set priorities for missions. Usually they "just accept the programmatic plans of the services with no regard for costs, and call it a strategy," Mr. Goldwater notes. With programs determining strategy, the services are preoccupied with business management, not lighting wars. Officers are rewarded for being managers, not warriors,

The two senators apply their criticisms to military organization, not individuals. They also blame Congress for constant meddling, often to secure weapons programs. They rebuke the services for ordering different kinds of weapons, more than they can afford to buy at efficient rates. They note signs of a "very worrisome future" because the new weapons now in production are proving too expensive to buy in the quantities needed. "The faster we run." says Mr. Nunn, "the 'behinder' we get."

At the root of many failings is the corrupting business of weapons-buying. Officers ne-glect military arts, seeking promotion through procurement. The services resist civilian conirol, lest they lose control over and the favor of contractors. The contractors hire officers, distribute jobs and lobby Congress so as to make their programs unstoppable.

The result is paralysis: no strategic planning, no unified command, no setting of priorities, no matching of weapons needs to mission. Increased defense budgets have made the disease only worse. The minor, but visible, symptoms are weapons that don't work, like the Sergeant York gun, fudged tests, contractor crime and overpriced spare parts. David Packard, former deputy defense secretary and head of the presidential panel on defense management, has already decided on the need for fundamental changes in weapons buying.

As institutions. Congress and the armed services like things just the way they are. But knowledgeable people in both, like Senators Goldwater and Nunn, realize that a fundamental cure is long past due.

President Reagan was lucky - his daring mission went off without a hitch. That is the adrenalin which could send his approval ratings soaring as he prepares for next month's meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Unfortunately, it could also open the door to further retaliation. For the terrorist philosophy will surely be: If the president of the United States can force down a plane and that of a friendly nation - why can't we? — South China Morning Post (Hong Kong).

The interception was a technical illegality, but did it amount to more than a "citizen's arrest," followed by a handing over of known criminals to lawfully constituted authorities? - The Times (London).

If the interception was conducted without the prior tacit understanding of Egypt, it is likely to be regarded as another hijacking of a commercial plane. The question now arises whether or not the U.S. action was a pertinent step in dealing with terrorism. The nationwide reaction of a superpower like the United States against a handful of pirates resulted in an action [comparable] to wielding a giant ax to eradicate a few flies. Such grandiose action is likely to please terrorists and escalate their activity. The more attention they receive, the better it serves their political purpose. The United States should maintain a calm posture. To avoid the vicious cycle of terrorism, we believe that any demand for extradition, which smacks highly of revenge, should be avoided. - The Mainichi Daily News (Tokyo).

A Leader Develops in India

Written off a year ago as a lightweight, Rajiv Gandhi has had an extraordinarily successful period as prime minister of India. He represented continuity of Congress rule and the Nehru dynasty, but also change. He has proved a strong, clear-sighted, decent leader, even a statesman, who has impressed the world as well as many of his own people. From the beginning, he resolved to make the hallmark of his leadership conciliation and cooperation, and not confrontation and cynicism.

WASHINGTON — The run-up to the Reagan-Gorbachev summit is producing some high dra-ma within the Reagan administration, and some high stepping in respect to the official reading of the as the administration now reads it, to Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972. countenance steps short of deploy- here by the reversal of Soviet and Successive administrations, includ-

But now National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane pops out with a new reading permitting testing and development of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative.

This is no matter for small quibbling. In some quarters inside the administration, and in many outside, it is accepted that if some testing and development limits are not applied to defensive arms, the Russians will lose most if not all of their taste for limiting offensive arms. This is what the summit is likely to be most about. At this point things get lawyerly. Having been taken around the sever-

For all of that, politically the new ninistration looks two-faced in surfacing on summit eve a brand new cow's summit priority. The explanation that officials did not get around to looking hard at the treaty until recently is embarrassing. It is quietly suggested that, despite the words of Mr. McFarlane, President Reagan has not personally signed off on the testing-and-development issue. This is, keep in mind, not just one more skirmish with his liberal critics but possibly the makeor-break issue of the summit.

If the president is convinced that pushing the pace on the SDI is vital to long-term American security, then he must be prepared to risk certain interim costs: frustration at Geneva, more tension abroad (although not the end of the world) and a new surge in the foreign policy debate that he largely stilled in the last year by turning a diplomatic face to Moscow.

I say this on the presumption that Mikhail Gorbachev does not have unlimited political license and must produce results, in the form of some progress toward an arms agreement, he is to sustain his experiment in Qualified U.S. officials say they have evidence of Mr. Abbas's direct links to the ship hijacking, and a wealth of information on his past terrorist activities. His release is dismaying, particularly in view of Italy's good record in fighting terrorism.

It need not, however, dampen Americans' pride in the capture of the hijackers and in penetrating at last what had seemed to be the immunity of terrorists to U.S. retaliation. This success does not mean the end of terrorism in the Middle East probably quite the opposite. And it does not mean that from now on all terrorists will be punished; that is possible only in special cases like that of the Achille Lauro. It does put terrorists on notice that the United States can and will act effectively when circumstances make it possible. If, moreover, any cloud of international illegality hangs over the action of U.S. military planes in forcing cown the Egyptian airliner that was a carrying the four terrorists to presumed freedom, it should be speedily dispersed by the facts of the matter. First, safe passage had been guaranteed only on condition that they had committed no acts of violence while they commanded the ship. Second, the Egyptian government by ac-cident or design misled Washington as to the whereabouts of the terrorists after it became known that they had murdered an American passenger. In fact, the terrorists' murder of Leon Klinghoffer invalidated the safe-passage guarantee as soon as the crime was discovered. And Egypt's confusing response appears to have made it impossible for either the United States or Italy to take custody of the terrorists by more conventional means than the aircraft intercept.

Ironically, the swift U.S. military operation may have validated earlier contentions - by President Jimmy Carter during the Iranian hostage cri sis and Mr. Reagan during the TWA hijacking earlier this year — that practical retaliatory measures could not be carried out in those cases.

This time, alert intelligence work gave what Mr. Reagan told Mr. Craxi was "reasonable certainty" that the four pirates were aboard the Egyptian airliner. Thus they could be apprehended with little danger to the lives of innocent persons. That was not the case in the earlier incidents, and rarely will be again.

dispute and distrust is still there. This :: U.S. officials are not saying whethis, alas, the Soviet-American pattern. er Mr. Reagan would have ordered the Egyptian plane shot down had it position is a bomb. The Reagan ad- not followed instructions to land, but the answer is almost certainly no. His : restraint in the past has shown that he treaty interpretation that liberates is not that kind of man. In this particthe SDI, whose containment is Mos- ular situation, how could be have ordered innocent persons -Egyptians aboard - killed after the strong language he used about the Soviet Union's destruction of Korean Air Lines flight 007 in 1983?

Some other cautionary notes may be useful. Americans need to restrain. for one thing, what some may regard as a justified bloodthustiness — as expressed in the old frontier saying, "Give 'em a fair trial and string 'em up" — while the Achille Lauro hijackers face justice in Italian courts. Abhorrence of terrorism requires respect for law, which must now be allowed to take its course.

The death penalty, in fact, is not an issue. Italy has abolished capital punishment, and the hijackers could not be executed in the United States, either. The murder of Mr. Klinghoffer having been committed on the equivalent of Italian territory, Abraham Soface, the State Department legal counsel, says that the hijackers could be charged under U.S. law only with hostage taking, piracy or conspiracy to do both — none of which crimes? are punishable by death.

U.S. relations with Italy and Egypt almost certainly will require a good deal of patching up. And events in the Middle East, unfortunately, may be stirred rather than calmed by Mr. Reagan's retributory stroke. Terrorist retaliation in some form is almost certain to follow, perhaps in ways not so open to a U.S. counterblow. And the Palestine Liberation Organization appears to have been besmirched anew by some degree of complicity in the Achille Lauro seizure. That can only complicate any Middle East peace process that depends ultimately on Palestinian participation.

1910: Macao's Fate Causes Concern PARIS - A Hong Kong resident connected with the attempted settlement of the Macao boundary dispute last year was interviewed [on Oct. 14] with regard to the effect of the Portuguese revolution upon the attitude of China towards Macao. He said, "The situation in Macao is second in importance to the overthrow of the monarchy. But any move which will encourage China to regain possession of Macao will strike a blow at every treaty to which China is a party. There is a far-reaching anti-foreign sentiment in China. Danger lies in any excuse that may be given by the Portuguess for a move on China's part which may result in the repudiation of the 1888 treaty. Portugal has allowed Macao to drift from a state of affluence to one of decay. It now appears to Chinese eyes as a wreck of valuable territory by an unwelcome alien Power."

1935: League Strikes at Italian Credit GENEVA - The League of Nations opened its financial offensive against Italy when its Committee of Co-ordination adopted (on Oct. 14] sweeping measures aimed at destroying Italian credit. Designed to make it impossible for Premier Mussolini to carry on his war in Ethiopia, the financial scheme urges member states to impose a total embargo on all governmental and commercial loans to Italy. If the plan succeeds, Italy will not be able to make any purchases in member states except on a basis of cash payments. The League's plan aims to make impossible such transactions as direct or indirect loans, subscriptions to loans, banking and other credits, issues of shares or other appeals for money. The plan was accepted by delegates of 50 nations in the full Committee of Co-ordination, with only Austria and Hungary maintaining their reservations.

This Switch Puts the Summit at Risk

BOSTON — it is only a matter of words — a Washington word game, you might say. But the players are after very large stakes. If their gambit works, it will sabotage next month's Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting. And they have an even more ambitious goal: to remove all constraints on the nuclear arms race. For 13 years the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty has been universally understood to mean what it says: that any ABM system based in space is outlawed. Now the claim is that it means the opposite. Out is in. Down is up. This amazing proposition was publicly advanced on television on Oct. 6 by President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane. He said the 1972 treaty "approved and authorized" development and testing of space-based ABM systems "involving new physical concepts" such as lasers or directed energy. In other words, Mr. Reagan's "star wars" program can push ahead with-out concern about the ABM treaty. But just last year the Reagan ad-ministration said in a formal statement: "The ABM treaty prohibition on development, testing and deploy-ment of space-based ABM systems or components for such systems applies to directed-energy technology or any other technology used for this purpose. Thus, when such directed-energy programs enter the field-testing phase, they become constrained by these ABM treaty obligations."

How can that plain meaning have been transformed? By an "interpretation" that ought to embarrass the most brazen lawyer in town.

Article 3 allowed a limited number of fixed, land-based ABMs. Article 5 banned development, testing and de-ployment of "sea-based, air-based, space-based or mobile land-based systems. In "Agreed Statement D," the parties said they would discuss ment permits new kinds of ABM systems unless the parties now agree to limit them. But the U.S. diplomats who negotiated it say the purpose was the opposite. And the agreed statement itself begins by saying that its purpose is "to ensure fulfillment of the obligations not to deploy ABM systems and their components except as provided in Article 3." An old national security hand, asked about the new reading of the treaty, said: "You've got to admire their brass. They have interpreted it 180 degrees from its intent. The new reading would make the treaty "a dead letter," its chief negotiator, Gerard Smith, has said. And the treaty will have been killed in a way that casts doubt on the point of making any arms control agreements with the United States. Treaties are meant to be serious undertakings. This one was negotiated for a purpose that all the world understood: to limit defensive systems. The U.S. Senate consented to the treaty by a vote of 88-2. Thirteen years later the United States would be telling the world: "The terms are inconvenient to us now, so on second thought they mean nothing.

The coming summit would almost certainly be doomed to failure if Mr. Reagan now adopted the new reading of the ABM treaty. The meeting is to focus on arms control. What would be left to say if America had just in effect renounced the main existing arms agreement? Mikhail Gorbachev would have a propaganda field day.

For all practical purposes, the whole idea of arms control would be dead. With restraints on defensive systems gone, the Soviets would hardly proceed with their proposal to cut back on offensive weapons. The impulse would be to an all-out arms race, offensive and defensive. With consequences so serious, for

Mr. Reagan personally and for international security, why would anyone in the Reagan administration be pushing to read the ABM treaty out of existence? The answer is that the man who surely started this game of words wants the summit to fail and wants all arms control to end.

Richard Perle, assistant secretary of defense, is the administration's principal thinker on these issues, and he is utterly opposed to arms control. The rereading of the ABM treaty has the stamp of his clever ruind, and of his ability to get ideas through the bureaucracy. But Secretary of State George Shultz has not yet approved this idea, and there is still a chance that he will try to protect the presi-dent from this self-inflicted wound.

WASHINGTON - James A. Baker 3d, the Treasury secretary, says he believes the plan passed by the Senate to bring the U.S. budget into balance by 1991 can be made to work without raising taxes, but that there would have to be reductions in the military budget.

President Ronald Reagan has indicated that he wants the Defense Department to be included in the kemptions from the spending-reduction plan that is now before a Senate-House conference commit-

But during a televised interview Sunday, Mr. Baker said he believed that Mr. Reagan must have anticinated the need for some cuts in military spending.

U.S. Seeks More Access to Private Data

Tax, Insurance Files Would Be Checked to Verify Claims

By David Burnham

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration plans to ask Congress for the legal authority to greatly expand the government's use of confidential tax data and give federal agencies direct access to information about individuals' private insurance coverage.

Under the proposal, the tax in-formation would be used by the government to determine the eligibility of millions of people applying for such widely used federal programs as guaranteed student loans and veterans' insurance.

The access to private insurance records would allow federal agencies to make sure an individual was not eligible for privately financed insurance benefits before it paid a claim under such government programs as Medicare.

The government does not now have the legal authority either to use tax information for such purposes or to gain access to private prepared recently by the adminisnsurance files. A spokesman for the Office of

As U.S. Farmers Suffer, So Do Towns

By William Robbins

New York Times Service
LENOX, Iowa — As small farmers in the United States struggle against a continuing economic crisis, the rural towns that dot the Middle West are trying to keep going themselves.

The towns appear to be losing people, and with them the taxes that they and their businesses paid. For the people left behind, the goverument services that have helped to nourish the country way of life are being eroded.

Schools have closed in such places as Lebanon and Ebson, in Kansas, both with populations that have dropped below 500. In Marshall County, Iowa, Sheriff Derald Gonzales has laid off half his force of eight deputies, at a time when part of his work, foreclosure sales of mortgaged farms, is increasing.

Here in Taylor County, where the delinquency rate of 12.98 percent on property taxes this year is nearly double the 6.6 percent rate in 1984, health services face cutbacks, and the county's gravel roads "will have to go back to dirt." according to Floyd Jobe, chairman of the county's Board of Supervi-

The services in Iowa towns are taking a double blow, with state financial support declining along with local tax revenue. Governor Terry E. Branstad recently imposed a $94 million cut, or 3.85 percent, in state expenditures across the board, including financial support for local services. Other states in the Middle West, including Nebraska and Kansas, are also seeing revenue fall short of projections.

The population loss that is partly behind these troubles is evident in such places as Lenex, a town of about 1,380 people. "For sale" signs dot the principal residential street. In nearby Ringold County, Sheriff Lyle Minnick said, "A lot of our young people are just taking moving to places like Arizona and Texas where they think they may find work."

Although there are "no nice, neat data to document what you are seeing," said Calvin Beale, the U.S. Agriculture Department's princi-pal population specialist in Wash-ington, "I readily agree with what I am hearing from a variety of sources. We are seeing a renewal of the period of loss that was interrupted in the 1970s."

Population in the farm belt in the 1970s grew, accompanied by a shift in the farm economy. After decades of lackluster performance, the 1970s brought booming sales. The stimulus was soaring exports that resulted partly from the opening of the Soviet market to American crops, partly from demand generated by healthy European economies, partly from the food needs of less-

JOHANNESBURG — A white soldier has been stabbed to death while on riot duty in eastern Cape province, and military officials said Monday that he was the first white soldier killed in 13 months of antiapartheid violence.

A statement by the South African Defense Force said Corporal Johan Schoeman was killed late Sunday afternoon in Kwazakele, a black township on the outskirts of the city of Port Elizabeth. South African soldiers have been deployed in the country's segregated townships since September 1984 to assist regular police units in putting down racial unrest.

Defense Force spokesman said Corporal Schoeman was on patrol in Kwazakele when a mob of several hundred blacks stoned the patrol's armored car.

Those issues, which involved the introduction of automated equipment for collating the various sections of the newspapers, were viewed by management as critical to the papers' economic future.

After agreement was reached on those topics and other noneconomic issues, the question of wages and benefits was left on the table. The gap between the unions' demands and the newspapers' offer has narrowed substantially in that area, prompting some observers, includ-

Tai Mahal Dome Begins to Leak In Heavy Rains

The Associated Press

NEW DELHI — The main dome of the Taj Mahal has started leaking after heavy rains, The Times of India said.

The 24-meter (79 feet) white-marble dome developed a leak on its northeastern side last week, the report said. The main chamber, which houses the grave of its build-er, Emperor Shah Jahan and his queen, Mumtaz Mahal, was flooded.

The water, which accumulated in the dark chamber, had to be constantly mopped, because there is no built-in drainage system in the 332year-old building, the paper report-

Earlier studies by experts have reported that cracks 6 to 10 feet long and a few millimeters wide have weakened the Taj Mahal. At some places small pieces of marble have started falling out. The cracks are caused by the gradually subsiding foundation and other stresses on the marble, the studies said. Historical records indicate that the dome of the Taj Mahal had leaked during rains immediately after its construction in 1653.

"Memorial Candles" gives both singer and violinist prominent cept of the composer's grand scheme. Lees has painted a broad canvas with bold strokes. Amid numerous textural changes (the work is heavily scored to feature brass percussion and the lower strings especially the cellos) one seldom loses sight of the form. The opening motif by the wind, for instance recurs just frequently enough and with just enough modification to ensure unity without monotony.

brooding are words that only begin to describe the relentless heaping of intensity upon intensity manifest-ing at times into a "wailing wall" of sound, which the orchestra dismantles with wrecking-ball efficiency. There are periods of respite. The cello yearningly opens "Manifesta-tions" with a fragmented Jewish folk song. Celesta passages add a magic sparkle. But sadness pre-vails. Even Zukerman's magnificent playing, whether sounding an outraged cry against the orchestra or whispering a delicate harmonic alone, conveyed deep suffering, an endless lament.

One obvious lapse in the performance was that Gal could not be beard when the orchestra operated at full force. Though texts were provided, a better balance needs to be struck in the future. Gal has a strong, dramatically acute voice (as her reading of two Mozart arias showed in the first half of the program), capable of rendering a line like "Tomorrow you will be dust in the shoes of those to come" with

NYSE Prices Sharply Higher

NEW YORK — Prices were sharply and broadly higher at the close of the New York Stock Exchange on Monday in light trading. The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 11.87 Friday, was up 14.79 to 1,354.73. Advances led declines by a 2-1 ratio. Volume amounted to about 77.4 million, down from 96.4 million Friday.

Prices were higher in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Analysts said many investors were impressed with the market's showing late last week, when it rallied despite International Business Machines's report of lower earnings for the third

To some observers, that suggested that the market was less vulnerable to disappointing news on corporate profits than it had been in recent weeks.

However, it was generally believed that it would take at least a few more days to test that optimistic thesis. Monday's trading was not expected to register any significant message with so many market participants absent be-cause of the holiday.

Gazing in the Metropolitan

By Souren Melikian

THE METROPOLITAN Museum of Art in New York is one of the most heavily attended museums in the world. On any given day, there is a dense crowd respectfully gazing at Rembrand's.
"Aristotle contemplating the Bust of Homer" or wandering about its superb collection of French impressionists. But few set eyes on the masterpiece in New York of the Roman Imperial period — the flat, curving silver handle to a large dish, now lost. It is so small, at 36.5 centimeters (14.2 inches), that one just passes

The Colors Moreover, the details that make up its beauty are minute. The handle is, in effect, a miniature scene in bas-relief. Indeed, it gives some idea of what 2d-century book painting must have of Assyrian and Egyptian influence, or gaze at looked like in whichever part of the world it was one of the most beautiful Hellenistic pieces I from an Iranian dealer in 1954 and also called it "Roman." While the 1954 piece is more Hellenistic in appearance, there, too, details betray the Eastern interpretation.

Unless the visitor is alerted to such objects, it is easy to miss them, like most silver from the Ancient World. Even in the museum's beautiful display of so-called "Greek and Roman silver," completed this year, they tend to disappear in the general glitter. Fortunately, the Metropoli-tan supplies the indispensable tool that poorer institutions cannot afford, a richly illustrated booklet by the chairman of the department, the eminent Hellenist, Dietrich von Bothmer.

Bagels: Stick to the Plain

By Jeff Jarvis

OU CAN judge a land by what it does to flour. France makes it into croissants, Italy into pasta. New York makes it into bagels, crusty and dense life-preservers of dough so heavy they would sink in liquid lead. Like New York, they are an acquired taste. And like New York, they are a daunting experience.

The best bagel is a fresh bagel, which can be bought from bakeries specializing in nothing but bagels all over the city. Trendier bagelries offer sesame, onion, raisin, rye or pumpernickel varieties, but stick

The hard part is figuring out the bagel's age by any means short of carbon dating. Even fresh from the oven, they are never soft. The only way to know whether a bagel is badly made or aged is if it is dry inside.

Which brings us to the first lesson in bagel-eating: Cut it in half. Hold the bagel in one hand and a knife in the other; stab at the edge of the bagel until you penetrate, then push until you see the blade in the center and start sawing.

You can toast the bagel - very lightly, not even enough for it to turn color, only enough to warm it. It is said that some people butter bagels; they must be outsiders. Kids, being kids, like peanut butter on their bagels. But the bagel was born for cream cheese, an odd American dairy product that resembles nothing but could be described as brie with no character or butter from albino

For a festival of odors, try lox (a simple name for smoked salmon) and onions atop the creamed cheese. Or try something very New York: whitefish salad.

Finally, cat. Your jaws will get as much exercise eating the bagel as your biceps did cutting it. A good bagel is thick and chewy and it rests in your stomach like premixed cement. It is not a subtle or sublime plea-sure; nothing about New York is. But it is a pleasure indeed.

American Food Is In

'Cooking, the most conservative of the arts, is the last to become totally American.'

By Irene Sax

ADORE American food," said a French banker with a reputation for knowing his way around New York. "There's Lutèce. There's Le Cygne. And, of course, there's Chinatown." Until recently, European visitors to New York thought they had to go to expensive French restaurants or tacky ethnic cales if they wanted to eat well.

But for the past year, New Yorkers have been having a love affair with their own American cuisine. In New York, it is now "in" to be American, and several of the city's most popular restaurants are those that serve American food. But what is American food? asked a puzzled visitor. The late James Beard, widely considered the father of the New American Cooking, said that American food was "what our mother cooked at home." According to Barbara Kafka, restaurant consultant and longtime associate of Beard, "Jim meant that literally. American cooking was what you are at home. When you went out, you ate French, Italian or Chinese food. Except in New Orleans, which thinks of itself as French, there was no distinct American restaurant cuisine."

But that has changed in the past few years. and there is now an American haute cuisine. It has something to do with the availability of quality produce - Wisconsin wild mushrooms, Florida Keys limes and Peconic Bay scallops — some vintages from the '50s. (969 Lexington and the improvement in American wines. It has Avenue, (212) 517-7600, $57 prix fixe.) more, probably, to do with the new chauvinism the patriotism that the world saw at the 1984 Olympics. And it is, according to Miss Kafka, simply an idea whose time has come.

"Once we thought we could buy European culture," she said. "During the past 50 years, we developed our own painting, literature, dance. Cooking, the most conservative of the arts, is the last to become totally American.

Most experts say there is no "totally American" style, but a collection of regional cuisines created by immigrants with different culinary traditions. The new chefs have reconciled these different regional cuisines and combined them with classic techniques and the best native produce to create the New American Cooking. Here are four new restaurants and two older

Now Mr. Allison is in Lower Manhattan, and his cooking has become more ethnic, more daring: raw Hawaiian tuna with a ginger marinade. Long Island duck sausage with red cabbage, pirogue stuffed with shellfish in a watercress sauce. For the past few years every risk Mr. Allison has taken, every idea he has tried, has worked.  When An American Place's chef-owner, Larry Forgione, trained at The Connaught in London, his fellow students made fun of American food. Now, many Europeans come to his tiny elegant restaurant and Mr. Forgione is conceded to be one of the best chefs in the city. His menu starts with native ingredients — fresh wild mallard duck from Long Island, Wilippa Bay knife-and-fork oysters (named for their size) — combined in classic preparations. THEN IN New York, you can stay at one of the enormous outposts of an international chain, and, as one of them promises in its ads, you will get "no surprises." But for those who do not require conference rooms or other business facilities, there are some interesting alternatives. Here are four of New York's smaller hotels, ranging from just four units to 160.

• Morgans, at 237 Madison Avenue between 37th and 38th Streets, owned by Steve Rubell and Ian Schrager of Studio 54 fame, is probably New York's hippest place to stay. The partners spent 14 months redoing the former Executive Hotel and they have made it as unhotel-like as

Silver Bear Still Growls, But It May Be Mellowing

By JAMES STERNGOLD

New York Times Service

EW YORK - A week after the silver market hiccuped upward on news that the Hunt family of Texas had sold most of its hoard of the metal, the market has resumed its slump. It seems that those who proclaimed the silver bear dead after its reign of the past few years have not yet heard its final growl.

Some traders were hailing the return of happier days on Oct. 3, when the spot silver price on the Commodity Exchange in New York, or Comex, jumped 5.5 percent following comments from a Hunt family spokesman that they had sold about 90 percent of their 59 million ounces of silver. But from that rise to $6.385, silver has since slid back to its close on Friday of $6.26, not a promising start for a bull rally. Nonetheless, some analysts have still found cause for optimism. They say that, while the silver market is unlikely to explode upward soon, several recent events, including the Hunt sales, have tilted the market's basic psychology more positively. They were quick to add that this might not show any results for several months but said that there was a slowly growing perception that at least there would be enough movement in the silver market to afford the nimble investor new opportunities.

"The market may still move sideways, but what you can say now is the downside is limited," said John H. O'Connell, research manager at Refco Inc. in New York. "There's some sense of Opportunity.

What the speculator needs is to see movement." said the head of a major precious-metals-trading operation. "The chances are better now that you'll have better volume and that extra bit of volatility that, over time, not right away, could make silver more

N THE high-inflation environment of the late 1970s, the billionaire Hunt family engineered a nearly successful attempt to corner the silver market. They built a huge position, which helped push prices toward $40 an ounce in 1980. But the Federal Reserve's anti-inflation policies and an exchange rule change were among the factors that, later in 1980, slammed the silver market down almost as fast as it had risen. It has not risen above $15 since then, averaging $8.14 an ounce last year and $6.18 in the first half of 1985, according to the Silver Users

The Hunts were left about as much silver as is used for industrial and commercial purposes in an entire year worth $1 billion less than what they paid for it, punishing financing costs, and an agreement with the Fed that they would sell their holdings by about 1990. The family tried to hold out for a return to higher prices before selling. It now appears, though, that only by their getting out of the market could more bullish conditions return.

One of those improvements is simply psychological. Investors, especially speculators, had known that the Hunts needed to sell their silver sometime, and that was a depressant. "There was a legitimate concern that they might have to unload," said Bette Raptopoulos, a precious-metal strategist at Prudential-Bache Securities. "You didn't know when. It was an overhang."

Analysts also said that economic factors could start to work in favor of silver. Inflation remains low — producer prices were reported on Friday to have actually fallen in September — but there is some feeling it has bottomed out, the analysis said.

Fleet Board Backs New Offer From United

By Bob Hagerty
International Herald Tribune
LONDON — Fleet Holdings PLC's board said late Monday that it would recommend that shareholders accept a takeover bid of E317 million ($447 million) from United Newspapers PLC. The bid, announced early Monday, represents a sharp increase from United's previous offer of about £270 million, which was vig-orously opposed by Fleet's board.

The planned takeover would create one of Europe's largest publish-

MAINTAINING THE MOST MODERN FLEET IN THE WORLD REQUIRES A HEALTHY SUPPLY OF DOM PERIGNON.

As our inflight service sets the standard that even other airlines talk about, it should come as no surprise that we are celebrating our recent acquisition of over a billion dollars of new aircraft with nothing less than Dom Penignon.

4 Asian Nations To Fight U.S. Bill

SEOUL - South Korea will SEOUL — South Korea will work with Hong Kong, Taiwan and Singapore to develop strategies to fight a U.S. bill sharply cutting textile imports, officials said Monday.

The bill, passed by the U.S. House of Representatives and sent to the Sanate on Thursday, could to the Senate on Thursday, could reduce South Korean textile ex-ports to the U.S. by about 35 per-The Federation of Korean Tex-tile Workers Unions said the bill could lead to the loss of 35,000 jobs.

THE FLAMINGO'S SMILE: Reflections in Natural History

By Stephen Jay Gould 476 pages. $17.95. W. W. Norton & Co. Inc, 500 Fifth Avenue,

New York, N. Y. 10110. Reviewed by Jeremy Bernstein

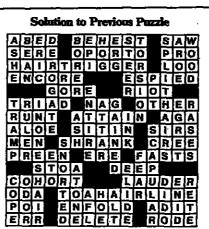

BELIEVE that if someone were to read me A any three sentences from a random essay by Stephen Jay Gould I could identify the author. This is partly because I have read nearly everything that Gould has written for popular con-sumption during the last decade, but it is mostly because, along with a few writers on science such as Lewis Thomas and John McPhee, Gould has developed — he probably always had — a very particular voice. In the first place, his writing never strays very lar away from his fields of special competence — paleontology, biology and geology. One will never find a Gould essay on, for example, the theory of elementary particles. (I wish some of my physicist colleagues would exercise the same restraint when they, for example, attempt to apply the most naive quantum mechanics to a biological system like the human brain).

In the second place almost all of his essays begin with some odd fact, e.g., the fact that when a flamingo feeds, it appears to smile because it turns its head upside down to est. This odd fact, Gould then shows, fits into a large and important general law; the flamin-go's inverted behavior has associated with it a whole set of evolutionary inversions. The flamingo's lower jaw has evolved to behave like a "normal" bird's upper jaw.

Finally, Gould's essays, even the most tech-nical of them, have to do with the splendor of life in all its multifoliate forms —a subject that could occupy a lifetime.
In "The Plamingo's Smile," his best and richest collection of essays to date, all the aspects of the Gould voice are on display. He is something of a basehall nut; in these essays he has managed to offer a novel explanation of why there are no more .400 hitters. This has to why there are no more 400 hitters. This has to do with the "professionalization" of the game. Both the lowest and the highest barting averages are moving choser to the mean because every aspect of the game has gotten better. Gould sees in this an analogy to the evolution of life forms. When certain life forms are introduced they vary in all sorts of ways. They experiment in the production of what used to be called "sports," or mutants. Most of these experiments fail. "When systems first arise, they probe the limits of possibility. Many variations don't work; the best solutions emerge, and variation diminishes. As systems regularize, their variation decreases." No more Ted Williamses.

If I have a cavil about this collection it is an editorial and generic one. These essays all appeared as columns in Natural History magaappeared as columns in Natural History maga-zine. Having done such books myself, I am all in favor of collecting essays that have appeared over a span of several years in magazines, but it does pose problems. Once having written something one might decide that it was wrong or badly expressed. What to do from the point of view of a collection? Two solutions are possible: the first is to add nostscrints and the or view of a conscious? The scanding possible; the first is to add postscripts and the second is simply to rewrite the essay. The latter is probably the correct thing to do. If not, one runs the risk of producing something like Douglas Hofstadter's "Metamagical Themas," which has been rendered all but unreadable by piling postscript on postscript, outweighing and often contradicting the original essays.

Surely, no one who reads a collection of essays like Gould's or Hofstadter's cares if an say in the book deviates from the original. What one cares about is the final product, which should represent the best thinking and writing the author is capable of when the book is being written. Happily, Gould, unlike Hofstadter, uses postscripting relatively sparingly.

As Gould tells us in the preface, for the last few years, he has been fighting a deadly form of cancer. Nothing in these essays shows any trace of this struggle. I look forward, and for a long time to come, to reading more essays by Stephen Gould.

Jeremy Bernstein's latest book is "Three Degrees Above Zero," a profile of science at American Telephone & Telegraph.

Confucius's Birthday Is Celebrated

United Press International BEIJING - Chinese scholars celebrated the 2,536th anniversary of the birth of Confucius and proposed that the philosopher's theories be widely taught in Chinese schools. The schol-ars, including Kong Demao, a 77th-generation direct descendant of Confucius (551-479 B.C.), gathered in Beijing for a seminar and birthday celebration, the Xinhua News Agency said.

Breaks of the Game

Lonnie Smith opened the Kansas City first with a double, stole third (above) when Garth Iorg was late in taking catcher Ernje Whitt's throw and scored the eventual winning run on George Brett's groundout. Late in the game a frustrated lorg (right) smashed a rubber bat on the steps of the Toronto dugout. Meanwhile, in St. Louis, speedster Vince Coleman was laid low after his leg was caught under a heavy tarpaulin cylinder, he missed the game, but his Cardinals dismantled the Dodgers, 12-2.

"Everyone gets a better press than Princess Di." "Nevertheless, Gorbachev has made a remarkable impression on the media. This proves what Mike Deaver has been saying for some time — all it takes to be the leader of a superpower is a smile on your face, a shine on your shoes and a good tailor to make sure your pants have a crease in them."

"There's more to it than that. The reason Gorbachev has been so successful is that he is a new act. and everyone wants to read about him. And why shouldn't they? He's the only Kremlin boss in 20 years who won't fall over while he's giving a speech. But the thing that makes him dangerous, gentlemen, is that he's the first Soviet head of

The Associated Press VENICE - "Il Paradiso" by the school of Jacopo Tintoretto, was returned to the Doges Palace after three years of restoration. The 16th-century painting, 82 feet by 26 feet (25 by 8 meters) was rehung in the palace's Grand Council Room on Saturday. International grants to the "Save Venice Foundation" totaling about my money on the president's tailor $100,000 paid for its restoration.

"It can't last. Everyone knows the more you make yourself available to the media the quicker they turn on you. I give him six months before the press starts kicking him around."

"We can't wait. Reagan and Gorbachev are going to meet in November and the big thing people will be watching is their charisma. And once they observe the two side-by-side the world will decide who is really the true Communicator. I don't think I have to tell you, the U.S. president cannot afford to come in second."

"Ronnie had charisma before Mikhail was born."
"Yes, but Gorbachev has iron

I thought Gromyko said he had iron teeth.

"It doesn't matter. Mikhail is a very shifty guy who knows how to make a lot of points with people in Western Europe. He's playing the media like a balalaika.

"Gorbachev may have a certain Bolshie charm but he can't tell sto-ries like the president."

been going gaga over Raisa."
That's because she hasn't had any serious competition. Raisa might win a tea party contest, but when it comes to evening wear Nancy will bury her."

"Mrs. Gorbachev is not our problem. Mikhail is the issue. We've never dealt with a Commie who looks like the chairman of an American oil company."

"What do we do? "Let Reagan be Reagan, and Gorbachev be Gorbachev. I'll put any day of the week."

Murray Burnett: Can Creator Play It Again, Rick?

By David Margolick

New York Times Service

New YORK — To Murray Burnett, it is as much a custody battle as a contractual dispute. He is fighting Warner Brothers for control of his children, who include Rick, an expatriate American cafe owner in Casablanca, a piano player named Sam and a host of others, with names like Victor Laszlo, Ugarte and Strasser.

Forty-five years ago, as a young man who had just seen Hitler's Europe first-hand, Burnett, with Joan Alison, wrote a play called "Everybody Comes to Rick's." It was a cautionary tale, a warning that, as fascism marched forward, good men and women everywhere had to take a stand.

The play never made it to Broadway, in part because producers balked over sugges-tions that Rick and the woman he had loved years earlier in Paris slept together when she went to Casablanca, Instead, it was purchased by Warner's for $20,000 a record at the time.

For the filmmaker, it was a wise invest-ment. "Casablanca," in which Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman, Claude Rains and Sydney Greenstreet played Burnett's characters, won the Academy Award for Best Picture in 1943, and it remains part of film folklore. For Burnett, the deal has been nothing but a source of frustration.

Two years ago, after Warner's produced a short-lived television series based on the movie, Burnett filed suit against the company in State Supreme Court in Manhat-

Citing cases involving Dashiell Ham-mett's Sam Spade and characters in Mar-garet Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," he said he still owned his characters, although he sold the play in which they appeared.

"These characters are part of me, and I have a great regard for them - even Ugarte." he said referring to the scoundrel who brought the fateful "letters of transit" to Rick's Café Américain. "I want them

Donald S. Zakarin of Pryor, Cashman, Sherman & Flynn, the lawyer representing Warner's, said that Burnett had been "paid fairly and fully for his contribution to 'Casablanca' " and that, "legally and factually. this case is clear-cut." Burnett faces serious legal obstacles if he is to prevail, none more formidable than the contract he signed with Warner's.

It provided that he and Alison "give, grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and set over" to the film company all rights "of every kind and character whatsoever, whether or not now known, recognized or contemplated, for all purposes whatsoever." Alison is a party to the suit, but she is ill and not active in the litigation. Just as that grant allowed them to alter

Murray Burnett with "Casablanca" poster.

Burnett's characters - Ilse Lund, the Norwegian woman played by Bergman in the have the Appellate Division of State Sumovie, was an American named Lois Mer-edith in the play; Rick, a bachelor in the month. Burnett's rights were not infringed, movie, was a lapsed lawyer with two children by a prior marriage in the play, and Major Strasser had been promoted from the play, where he was a captain - it authorized them to use those characters in later Casablanca clones.

There have been two such productions, a 1955 version in which Casablanca is infested with Soviet spies looking for nuclear secrets, and a 1983 series starring David Soul as Rick and Scatman Crothers as

Six weeks after the last episode of the series was broadcast, Burnett filed a $60million lawsuit charging Warner's with breach of contract, misappropriation and cheapening the value of his characters.

Two New York courts have ruled against him. This year, Justice John A. K. Bradley of State Supreme Court in Manhattan declared that the dispute was covered by federal copyright law and belonged in federal court. "Plaintiffs may play it again, but they must do it in United States District Court," he wrote.

Burnett appealed the decision, only to the First Judicial Department of the division ruled unanimously, because he had retained no rights at all. His lawyers, Michael Zissu and Patricia Murphy, who are handling the case on a contingent-fee basis, recently decided to take the case to the Court of Appeals, the state's highest court.

Burnett, 72, who later wrote radio scripts for Marlene Dietrich and works for the Corporation for Entertainment and Learning in Manhattan, conceded there was more at stake in the case than owning a few fictitional characters.

Under federal law, the copyright will revert to him in a few years, and he will be free to complete his sequel to "Everybody Comes to Rick's" — its first 15 pages have long been sitting in his desk drawer.

In the sequel, be said, he wanted to remind everyone of his long-forgotten role in the creation of a classic - a movie that for many years he has found painful to see.

completed it - in part, he said, because he feared it would provoke a lawsuit by Warner's and he could not afford a lawyer to defend him. His sequel has Rick running a bar in Estoril, outside Lisbon, sometime after World War II. Although Renault, the French police officer portrayed in the movdoes, nor, said Burnett, could she.

"Look, things change," he explained. "It was a star-crossed romance, doubly starcrossed when she went off with Laszlo. I Burnett and his collaborator wrote "Evmean, it's like my first wife. If I saw her eryone Comes to Rick's" in a six-week today — and I haven't seen her for years stretch in the summer of 1940, when he was I would look at her and say, 'It's over.'"

To Earthquake Survivors Placido Domingo, who lost four close relatives in the Mexico City carthquake, plans to leave the op-era circuit for a year. "I am asking every theater in the world to give me one year's leave of absence, starting immediately," he told The Sunday Times of London. "I plan to give a whole year of concerts for survivors of the earthquake." The Spanish tenor, who emigrated to Spanish tenor, who emigrated to Mexico as a child, said he hopes to give 40 concerts and raise $8 milion to provide housing for about 200 families living in the building where his relatives died on Sept. 19.

A Jewish group's legal complaint against a Ramer Werner Fass-binder play with anti-Semitic over-tones has been rejected, a spokesman for the Frankfurt prosecutor's office said. Jochen Schroers said there was no legal basis for racial slander charges against the direc-tors of the play, "Der Müll, die Stadt und der Tod," (Garbage, City and Death)" which premieres Oct. 31 in Frankfurt. He called the play "a work of art that cannot be for-bidden." The West Berlin Jewish Cultural Forum filed the complaint against the director Günther Rible, his dramatic adviser and stage director. The main figure, referred to as "The Rich Jew," is a land speculator who murders a prostitute at the end of the play.

Msiisisv Rostropovich, 58, the Soviet-born cello virtuoso and music director of the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington since 1971, was given the Albert Schweitzer Music Award on Sunday for "a life's work dedicated to music and devoted to humanity" by the Creo Society, a comprofit organization that sponsors benefits promoting creativity in the arts and sciences.
